

W. J. BRYAN QUILTS POST TODAY AS NOE IS SENT TO GERMANY; LANISING ACTING SECRETARY

RESIGNATION BECOMES EFFECTIVE AS WILSON SENDS MESSAGE OF LUSITANIA AFFAIR.

Retiring Official Puts Finishing Touches on Statement Explaining Reasons Why He Could Not Indorse Wilson's Policy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, June 9.—William Jennings Bryan formally left his office as secretary of state today and Robert Lansing, counselor of state department, was appointed by President Wilson as secretary of state in interim.

The change in the cabinet at a critical moment in the nation's history, took effect with the dispatch of the note to Germany.

Differing not in the subject sought—the prevention of war—but in the method of approaching the problem, Mr. Bryan resigned rather than sign his name to the note, which he regarded as a violation of the principles of the United States.

Mr. Bryan told his colleagues and friends today as they gathered about him in farewell, that his affection for President Wilson was unchanged, and that he knew the president felt as warmly toward him.

Trusting that he can advance the cause of peace outside of official life, and build up a sentiment in the United States that will assist the president in maintaining friendly relations with all nations, Mr. Bryan today went back to private life.

The resignation of the secretary of the United States over difference in opinion on the vital question of foreign policy itself is unusual in the annals of American history—was not reflected in the cabinet crisis, but in the morning papers on Friday.

Simultaneously William Jennings Bryan's resignation as secretary of state took effect and he gave out a statement of his attitude.

He contends the difficulties between Germany and the United States should be investigated by an international commission and that Americans should be warned to keep off belligerent ships or those carrying ammunition through the danger zone. On the differences with the president Mr. Bryan's statement in part:

"First, as to the suggestion of investigation by an international commission, I am in favor of it. Second, as to warning Americans against traveling on belligerent vessels or with cargoes of ammunition, I believe that this nation should be willing to apply in this case the principles which we are bound by treaty to apply to dispute between the United States and thirteen countries providing for an investigation of disputes of every character and nature.

These treaties, negotiated under this administration, make war practically impossible between the United States and the thirteen governments, representing three-fourths of all the people of the world.

"Among the nations with which we have these treaties are Great Britain, France and Russia. No matter what dispute may arise between us and these treaty nations, we agree there shall be no declaration of war and no commencement of hostilities until matters in dispute have been investigated by an international commission and a year's time is allowed for investigation and report. This plan was offered to the nations without any exceptions whatever, and Germany was one of the nations that accepted the principles, being the 12th. I think, no treaty was actually entered into with Germany, but I cannot see that that should stand in the way when both nations endorsed the principle.

be about a thousand words long. "I will make it public as soon as I learn that I am no longer secretary of state," said Mr. Bryan. "That will be when the note is dispatched."

Resignation Effective Today.

Mr. Bryan's letter of resignation had asked that his resignation be effective when the note was sent, unless President Wilson wished to accept it sooner.

When Mr. Bryan started for his office, Mrs. Bryan walked down the drive with him to his carriage, and at the approach of the couple, the old state department coachman who for many years has driven the carriages, got down from his box and, hat in hand, told them both how much he regretted to see Mr. Bryan go and how much he had appreciated the secretary's kindness.

As the secretary drove to his office, for the last time, he passed throngs of government clerks on their way to their office, reading in the morning papers news of his resignation. He was surrounded by scores who wanted to say a word of goodbye, as he entered the office.

Counselor Lansing, who on Mr. Bryan's resignation, becomes acting secretary of state, was at his desk early today and shortly before ten o'clock went to the White House and saw the president.

Bryan Claims His Peace Treaties Provide a Means of Settlement

[RECEIVED BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, June 9.—Just after two o'clock this afternoon the new American note to Germany, which caused the cabinet crisis culminating in Secretary Bryan's resignation, started on its way to Berlin.

It will be given out for publication in the morning papers on Friday. Simultaneously William Jennings Bryan's resignation as secretary of state took effect and he gave out a statement of his attitude.

Letter of Resignation.

Following is Mr. Bryan's letter of resignation:

Secretary of State,
Washington, June 8, 1915.
My Dear Mr. President:

It is with sincere regret that I have reached the conclusion that I should return to you the position of Secretary of State with which you honored me at the beginning of your administration. Obedient to your sense of duty and actuated by the highest motives, you have prepared for transmission to the German government a note in which I cannot join without violating what I deem to be an obligation to my country, and the issue involved is of such moment that to remain a member of the cabinet would be as unfair to you as it would be to the cause which is nearest my heart—namely, the prevention of war.

I therefore respectfully tender my resignation to take effect when the note is sent, unless you prefer an earlier date. Alike desirous of reaching a peaceful solution of the problems arising out of the use of submarines against merchantmen, we find ourselves differing irreconcilably as to methods which should be employed.

It falls to your lot to speak for the nation; I consider it none the less my duty to endeavor as a private citizen to promote the end which you have in view by means which you do not feel at liberty to use.

In severing the intimate and pleasant relations which have existed between us during the past two years, permit me to acknowledge the profound satisfaction which it has given me to be associated with the important work which has come before the State Department and to thank you for the courtesies extended.

With the best wishes for your personal welfare and for the success of your administration, I am, my dear President,

Very truly yours

W. J. BRYAN.

President's Reply.

The President, replying to Mr. Bryan, said:

My Dear Mr. Bryan:

I accept your resignation only because you insist upon its acceptance, and I accept it with much more than deep regret, with a feeling of personal sorrow. Our two years of close association have been very delightful to me. Our judgments have accorded in practically every matter of official duty and of public policy until now; your support of the work and purposes of the administration has been generous and loyal beyond praise; your devotion to the duties of your great office and your eagerness to take advantage of every opportunity for service offered has been an example to the rest of us; you have earned our affectionate admiration and friendship. Even now we are not separated in the object we seek, but only in the method by which we seek it.

It is for these reasons my feeling about your retirement from the Secretaryship of state goes much deeper than regret. I sincerely deplore it. Our objects are the same, but we ought to pursue them together. I yield to your desire only because I must, and wish to bid you Godspeed in your going. We shall continue to work for the same ends, even when we do not work in the same way.

With affectionate regards,
Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

ADAPTING GERMANY TO NEW CONDITIONS

State's Supervision of Agricultural Resources Has Been Very Satisfactory.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, June 9.—The state's supervision of the agricultural resources of the country has been brought to a high state of perfection during the past few months. Questions of credits, supplies, labor and marketing, have all received attention. In fact, every effort has been made to adapt the country to the new conditions.

Much effort was needed to transform the organization of credit which so powerfully supports German agriculture in accordance with the requirements of the new situation.

One of the acute difficulties was the supply of artificial fertilizers, since the importation of nitrates and guano has ceased. The problem has been in general solved by the use of products in which use is made of the store of nitrogen in the air. In this, as in other respects, Germany hopes in the future to be self-supporting.

The German Farmers' Supply Association, originally an agency for the purchase and distribution of a special manure, has now, at the request of the imperial government, become the supply and distribution of the whole range of artificial fertilizers. It has also taken over the loaders and fertilizers which were seized and sent to Germany from the war zones of Belgium, France and Poland.

The labor difficulty was also a serious problem. A special organization was formed to supply labor-saving agricultural machinery to farmers, and it is stated that 300,000 machines have been brought from the devastated districts of Poland. Prisoners of war will also be used; there are over a million prisoners in the various camps of Germany. Many of these have been mobilized for agricultural labor.

All the German cities and towns are turning to account their waste land. Cologne, for example, has made considerable progress in reclaiming 1,500 acres with peas for the city and to cultivate potatoes on every available piece of ground within the city limits.

ENGLISH AUTHORITY DECLARES WAR WILL INCREASE INSANITY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, June 9.—Sir James Crickton-Brown, who stands in the forefront of English authorities on mental diseases, says that one of the saddest results of the war will be a great increase in the number of lunatics.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Asylum Workers' Association, he said: "Much of the aftermath of war will find its way into asylums. The enormous number of cranial injuries will undoubtedly lead to such mental impairment. The large number of cases of shock to the nervous system, and other disorders. There has been throughout the whole country immeasurable sorrow and bereavement which many of us will deeply feel."

In Mr. Bryan's dramatic resignation observed in some quarters, profess to see a development in this country of the European idea of a responsible cabinet answerable to public opinion. In nearly all constitutions of European countries it had been the custom for the entire cabinet to resign as a whole.

The nearest approach to Secretary Bryan's action recalled here was the resignation in 1898 of James A. Garfield, of Maryland, postmaster general, in President McKinley's cabinet. His resignation was based upon repugnance to the approach of war with Spain.

ACTIVITY IN GALICIA

Russians Will Lose Lemberg Unless Colossal Counter-attack Is Organized—Forces in Bukovina Cut Off.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, June 9.—From Cabaretta to the head of the Gulf of Trieste the forces of Italy are consolidating their positions along the river Isonzo and in a week, perhaps sooner, the first serious battle along this front should be fought. Advances on Lemberg.

In the eastern arena the Russians are fighting desperately to stem the Austro-German advance in the direction of Lemberg. While some sections of the British press maintain that the Teutonic rush has lost its impetus, the most general feeling is that unless the Russians are successful in developing a counter-offensive on a colossal scale, the entire Galician situation will remain unfavorable to the Russian arms and more than likely involve the abandonment of Lemberg, capital of the crownland of Galicia.

In the western theatre, the slow but steady French gains predominate the situation.

Berlin, June 9.—One of the most useful officials engaged in assisting and teaching crippled soldiers is the well-known artist Unthan, who was born without arms, but who, nevertheless, has become a remarkable violin player, a painter and an expert swimmer.

Unthan is a firm believer in swimming as an aid to the physique of the crippled, and maintains that it is really a hindrance rather than a help in the water. He recently lectured to a group of persons interested in caring for crippled soldiers, and then gave an exhibition of his remarkable armless swimming. He is being pointed out as an example of courage and independence to be followed by the German soldiers invalided back home.

SCHOOL PLAN IS OUTLINED BY GOVERNOR

SENDS SPECIAL MESSAGE TO LEGISLATURE GIVING HIS PLAN FOR IMPROVING SCHOOL SYSTEM.

URGES CENTRAL BOARD

Gives Reasons Why Proposed Law Will Bring About Much-Needed Reforms—Asks Passage of Other School Measures.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 9.—A complete outline of a legislative plan for the development of the schools of Wisconsin, was given by Governor E. L. Philipp today in a special message to the legislature. He urged the passage of a bill for a central board of education law because, he says, it will "put into educational hands responsibility for educational affairs, and into business hands responsibility for business affairs."

Coincident with his recommendation for the passage of the substitute for the Van Gorden central board of education bill, the following bills to improve the common schools are approved by the governor:

A bill proposing that the state pay from the seven-tenths mill tax for common schools graduated increases in salary to rural and village school teachers according to length of efficient service.

A bill for better supervision of country schools, giving a supervising teacher for every 50 or 60 schools.

A bill for a county board of education of three members to be appointed by the county board instead of elective.

A bill to increase the minimum compensation of county superintendents from $1,000 to $1,200 per year.

"These four bills and a central board of education are measures proposed by this administration in the interest of better educational system," declared Governor Philipp.

In support of his central board bill, the governor quotes from a letter by President Silas Evans of Ripon college, declaring in favor of "simplicity of oversight in educational affairs."

The governor asserts that the more recital of this many-sided program for aiding the rural and common schools shows that the bill represents a long-step forward.

The text of Governor Philipp's message is as follows:

For some time a sentiment has been growing in the State of Wisconsin against our present system of governing educational institutions. That sentiment is now very strong. It is not too much to say that the people believe that our educational system is too heavy. While we have given much time and money to the development of higher education, our common schools have received too little attention, particularly our rural schools which are such an important factor in upbuilding our state interests.

There is also a strong sentiment among our people that our higher institutions are earning have developed too fast. I do not mean that in the matter of quality our growth has been too high. But it is a general belief that our educational institutions can never be too high. But it is a general belief that our educational institutions have adopted a policy of expansion which is outrunning the needs of our own state.

With a view to making a more equitable distribution of money for educational purposes, and with the further object of correlating our educational system so that all this legislation has undertaken to create new laws with respect to education.

ALL EFFORTS TO FIX MINIMUM WAGE FAIL

ASSEMBLY KILLS VINT BILL AND AMENDMENTS TO IT REGULATING WOMEN'S WAGES.

DECISIVE VOTE TAKEN

Most Important Amendment Voted Down 57 to 25 at Session Last Night—Senate Doings.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., June 9.—Every effort to establish a definite minimum wage by law for women over 18 years of age in mercantile and industrial establishments of the state was defeated in the assembly last night by a vote of 57 to 25. The Mortensen amendment to the Vint bill fixing the minimum wage in first class cities at $9 per week, second class cities at $8 and all other cities at $7, was defeated by a vote of 25 to 57. Assemblyman Crosby's amendment to fix the minimum for first class cities at $9, and for all other cities at $6 was killed, 25 to 55. The original bill to fix a minimum wage throughout the state at $10 was killed by a vote of 62 to 18. The principal vote came on the Mortensen amendment, as follows:

How They Lined Up.
For the amendment—Ballard, Crosby, Dobie, Gargrave, Frederick, Hart, Hedding, Kent, Kleinsteiber, Metcalfe, Minkley, Mortensen, Norman, Nye, Ofsted, Pieper, Rantz, Schindler, Schroeder, Smith, Tews, Vint, Weather, Zinn and Speaker Whitte—25.
Against amendment—Arneimann, Aulenbacher, Beckwith, Beringer, Biel, Bradley, Budlong, Byse, Caldwell, Cretney, Dixon, Donnelly, Edwards, Ellingbo, Ertel, Frechott, Gampert, Grall, Hambrecht, Carl Hansen, F. Hansen, Julius Hanson, Harrington, Heathcote, Helm, Harzog, Hoffman, Jensen, Kay, Killa, Krems, Kretlow, Kubast, Kubatzki, Kurenbacher, Laursen, Lentz, McGowan, Morgan, Murphy, Nelson, Neumeister, O'Brien, Pickert, Plogert, Poole, Prescott, Spoor, Stempert, Stewart, Van de Ven, Vinograd, Vincent, Waldran, Wells, Winegar, Woodard—57.

The chief arguments for the bill were made by Assemblymen Minkley and Vint. The latter read statistics gathered by the industrial commission to substantiate the demand for a minimum wage of $10 a week. Minkley said that moral conditions demanded legislation of this character. Assemblyman Hambrecht opposed the bill, claiming Wisconsin already had a minimum wage law and there was no call for additional legislation. He said Utah was the only state which had attempted to fix a definite minimum wage. Assemblyman Vinograd said he could not find a person in his city (Beloit) who favored a minimum wage. Assemblyman Crosby said that it was a moral issue and that it was up to the legislature to decide whether they would stand for the morality of the girl or not. The original bill was killed upon motion of Assemblyman Kubast.

Reverse Former Action.

The assembly reversed its action of six weeks ago when it passed a bill prohibiting boxing contests in cities of the first class. At the session last night it concurred in an amendment to the Hedding bill permitting boxing contests in all cities which by local authority grant permission to them. This amendment was incorporated by a vote of 56 to 20, in spite of efforts by Assemblyman Bradley of Hudson and Carl Hansen to defeat it.

There was another long debate over the Minkley bill, which was passed by a vote of 14 to 16 years ago. This was adopted. The original bill, which was passed last week, fixed the age at 18 years. The amendment for 16 years was championed by Assemblyman Crosby of Clark county.

After a brief debate the assembly sent back to committee the Hambrecht bill to prohibit trespassing on railroad rights-of-way. This amendment was incorporated by a vote of 56 to 20, in spite of efforts by Assemblyman Bradley of Hudson and Carl Hansen to defeat it.

Two Bills Introduced.

Two bills were introduced, placed upon the calendar, acted upon, passed and messaged to the assembly in a brief session of the senate last night. The first was offered by Senator Bray and was in the nature of a corrective measure. One removes the clause in the commission government law which provides that in third and fourth class cities the mayor and councilmen shall constitute the board of public works and the board of review. Senators Bray and Tomkins explained that in cities the size of Oshkosh the commission does not have time, with its multifarious other duties, to sit on the board of review or act as a board of public works. The bill does not apply to Superior, a second class commission city.

The other new bill passed was a measure offered at the request of former Senator M. F. White of Winnebago, giving county boards the power to take over school buildings by purchase as well as to erect school buildings. It was explained by Senator Bray that the village of Winnebago has negotiated with the county board for the purchase of the Winnebago county school of agriculture at Winnebago to be used as a high school, but that the present law does not allow a county to purchase a school building already erected. The bill adds two words to the statute—"or purchasing." The village's option expires on June 23, so that immediate action was urged by the senate. There was no opposition and the bill was passed.

Other Bills Acted Upon.

The senate adopted the assembly substitute amendment and then concurred in the Hedding bill prohibiting the wearing of police badges by persons not authorized to do so, upon penalty of 30 days imprisonment or fine of $20, or both, and a stiffer penalty is added for the unauthorized wearing of police uniforms. Actors in theaters are specifically exempted. The senate concurred in a slight amendment to the Kubatzki bill providing that upon three months notice from the city, public utilities shall lay underground conduits, wires, pipes, etc., when streets are paved with a concrete foundation, and the bill was concurred in. An amendment to the Dobie bill relating to attendance at industrial schools was concurred in and the bill again concurred in. These bills were all on Wednesday's calendar, which was taken up last night in anticipation of a heavy calendar today.

The senate reported for non-concurrence.

HOOPER RIGHT MAN IN RIGHT POSITION

H. F. BLISS IN COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS AT SCHOOL FOR BLIND LAUDS SUPERINTENDENT.

FINE PROGRAM GIVEN

Diplomas Presented to Graduating Class By W. H. Graebner of State Board of Control—Large Attendance.

Superintendent J. T. Hooper of the state institute for the blind was commended as the "right man in the right place" by H. F. Bliss, a former superintendent of the institution, in his address at the commencement exercises last evening. Mr. Bliss' words of tribute to the institute and its work were merely a preface to his main speech, which was directed to the student and graduates. In his opening remarks he said:

"My talk tonight will be to the school and I take this opportunity to say a word for the superintendent, Mr. Hooper. Not that he needs any word of commendation from me, but partly of a fraternal feeling which I have for him and mainly because I believe that the state as well as the nation has been benefited by his work to secure his position."

"Mr. Hooper is in the prime of life and has a little family growing up about him which keeps him in touch with the world. He also has a wife who is a helpmate to him in his work. Mr. Hooper combines with intellectual ability that rare grace known as practical common sense, and the pupils of this institution will acquire more than technical knowledge. Many of them will become independent bread winners."

"When Mr. Hooper came here I asked him if he was a golfer and he said he was. I think that he joined the club but I have never seen him on the grounds. Why? Because the work here is so absorbing that it takes all of his time."

"When I came out from town twenty years ago to direct this work I said to myself that whatever else I do I will not lose interest in the commercial and social life of the city which has always been my home, but did, and when I returned here, after twenty years, it meant the forming of new associations."

"Mr. Hooper is the right man in the right place. He has recently been appointed for another year, and I hope he will continue to be reappointed as long as he can be induced to stay."

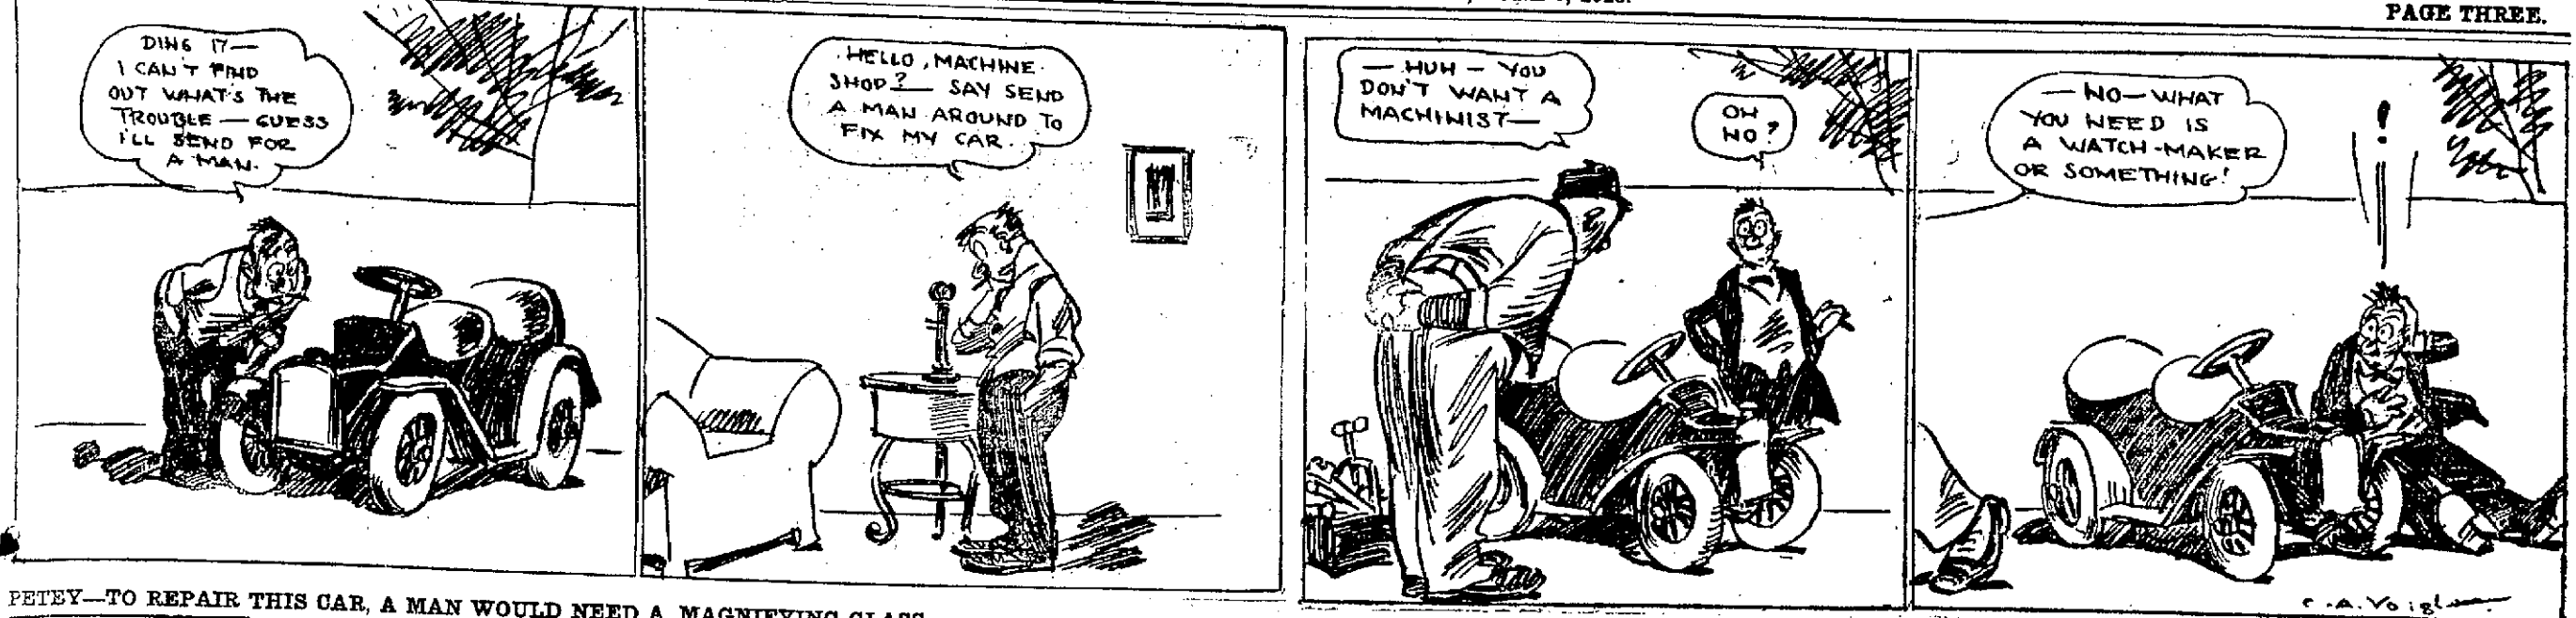

"There was a large attendance at the exercises, the crowd of which W. H. Graebner of Milwaukee, of the state board of control, presented the diplomas. Elmer Meyer of Ripon was the only student to complete the four year course. He was awarded a certificate indicating that they have successfully completed the course in weaving and are now prepared to practice their trade. Their names follow: Mary, Bernice, Marie Wahlers, Mary Haun, Blinn Soderstrom, Chester Hill, Harry Wright, Ervin Laubheimer, Calvin Smith, Hugo Lewis and Herman O'Polka. John P. Lewis of Edgewood, Wis., another member of the board of control who attended the exercises, Hon. James O. Davidson, president, who was to have presented the diplomas, being unable to do so, presented them by proxy."

Last evening's program was of an unusually high order. The musical numbers were greatly enjoyed and included selections by the orchestra, a quartet, a vocal solo by Miss Clara Rausch, a selection by the double quartet and a closing song by the chorus. Mr. Meyer, who was greatly appreciated, gave an excellent talk on the subject, "Alaska, Past, Present and Future."

MANY CIVIL CASES BEFORE MUNICIPAL COURT

Numerous civil action cases are pending before the municipal court, several being adjourned today by the court for future trial or settlement. Yesterday afternoon evidence was taken in the Bold case of John Burger against Michael Grell, and decision was deferred in the case by the court until June 15th. Attorneys Woolsey & Arnold and Owen Rittland appeared as counsel for the contesting parties. The action is over commission on a real estate deal, the defense demanding judgment to the amount of $300.

The suit of the International Harvester company against J. T. DeGoster, set for Tuesday, was adjourned until July 12th. The suit is over a promissory note amounting

RACE AT GALESBURG DREW STAR DRIVERS

Many of the Best Pilots of the County Entered in Hundred Mile Race at Illinois City Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Galesburg, Ill., June 8.—Thousands of speed fans from all parts of the Middle West arrived in Galesburg during the night to be on hand for the 100-mile auto race here today.

Some of the world's fastest drivers were entered in the classic run today. The race is being run at the Galesburg mile track, acknowledged to be the fastest and only dead level racing course in the world.

It was anticipated that old record would be broken. Last fall, Ralph Mulford set a new world's record for a dirt track and the course was not in the best of shape, owing to previous rains. Mulford won the one hundred mile race in a spectacular finish, after Bob Burman ran out for gasoline. Burman led nearly 50% miles.

The following week at Minneapolis, Minn., the world's records established here were beaten.

Tom Alley and Eddie O'Donnell, driving Duesenberg cars, were picked by hundreds of speed fans to win the race. This was due to the fact that they both made such a fine showing in the Indianapolis race on Decoration day.

Chandler, driving the third Duesenberg car, was expected to figure in the money.

Andy Burt was believed by some to be a "dark horse" and might spring up and take away the honors. Cooper, Brown, Ostovic and McLester were confident of making a fine showing. They declared their cars to be in shape and well able to withstand the test.

McLester has been in Galesburg for the past two weeks and has hit a fast clip on a number of trial starts. He said the track was good for eight miles per hour. All the cars were in Galesburg last Saturday.

PLAN NATIONAL BODY TO GOVERN BOXING

New York Promoters Are Considering Plan Which Would Remove Much of the Evils of Game.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, June 8.—The New York boxing promoters—at least the progressive ones—are seriously considering the suggestion recently made that a national governing body be selected to control the fight game. Plans are being made for a meeting to be held here next fall at which the organization of such a body will be perfected.

Representatives from every state in which boxing is regulated by state laws are expected to attend.

Thomas S. Andrews, boxing writer and promoter of Milwaukee, Wis., is responsible for the suggestion. Andrews has been associated with the fight game for several years and has done much to elevate it to a higher plane. He believes that with a national governing body that would regulate the game, boxing would be permitted in many more states than it is now.

One thing the commission would settle first would be a scale of weights for the different championships. At present weights for the different titles are shifted up and down to suit the pleasure of whoever happens to hold the championship at the time. Under a national commission this would be done away with. The lightweight championship, for instance, would have to be decided at 133 pounds. Recently it has been set at 135 pounds.

Uniform rules to govern boxing all over the country would be adopted also. At present various kinds of rules govern the game. In many western states, boxers are permitted to hit in the breakaways. In New York and several other states where boxing is regulated by the laws, the boxers have to "break clean." They are not allowed to hit when stepping out of a clinch.

A national body could also govern championships. No fighter would be permitted to hold a championship indefinitely without defending it. A present champion could hold his title forever without risking it in a bout to a decision if he cares to do so.

Avaricious managers have also been a thorn in promoters' sides for a long time. A national governing body could in a large measure do away with this evil. Exorbitant demands by boxers could be regulated.

GIANTS CRUSH CUBS IN FINAL GAME, SCORE 9-3

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Chicago, June 8.—The New York Giants closed their series with the Cubs by giving the Chicagoans a wallop by the score of nine to three, when they made a heavy attack. The Cubs still hung onto first place, while the Giants moved out of the cellar of the National league. Marquard proved a mystery for the Cubs, who in turn fell down in supporting Lavender.

For seven innings it was an interesting scrap, the Giants leading, 4 to 1, and then Standridge started the heavy. Before he could control the pesky Giants they had walloped home four more runs in the eighth. The game was featured by wrangling. Archer added to the Cubs' score with a home run with one on in the ninth.

Sox Back on Top.
Boston, June 8.—As Detroit lost, and the White Sox defeated Boston yesterday by the score of 4 to 3, the Chicago club are back in first place. The Sox were out-hit and out-played but they took advantage of the blunders made by the Red Sox in the seventh round, which netted two runs.

Jim Scott replaced Benz and the victory was assured. Manager Rowland gave the Sox a shake-up, benching Bretton and Brier and playing Blackburn and Roth. Felsch is back in the game at center and hit good yesterday.

PROPOSE SICKNESS INSURANCE FOR WORKERS IN THE COUNTRY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, June 8.—The feasibility of a system of sickness insurance for the United States and for states, by which wage-earners would be enabled to meet the expenses of ill-health and the various health promoting agencies be stimulated in the prevention of disease among industrial workers, has been the subject of investigation by members of the staff of the federal Commission on Industrial Relations and the U. S. Public Health Service, according to an announcement by the Bureau of the Public Health Service here.

A system of sickness insurance similar to those in operation in European countries, states the report, is based upon the principle that insured wage-earners, by small weekly payments that are supplemented by proportionate payments from employers and from the government, will be enabled to receive weekly cash benefits and medical and hospital service for himself and his family in times of sickness. Employers, employees, and the public will thus have a definite financial incentive to reduce the amount of sickness, and the preventive agencies now at work will be afforded a field for closer co-operation with industrial and trade union organizations for the purpose of lessening disease.

Under present conditions, it is pointed out, millions of low-paid wage-workers are unable to meet the expense of sickness and not only suffer from lack of proper medical care, but are deprived of their income during periods of ill-health.

MODEL WAR TRENCHES SHOWN IN EXHIBITION NEAR CITY OF BERLIN.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Berlin, June 8.—One of the popular exhibits in attractions now open to the public in Berlin is a series of model trenches, which have been constructed on the edge of the Grunewald Forest, in the outskirts of the city. They extend over a front of 800 feet, and are an exact reproduction in every detail of trenches on the Western front. A small admission fee is charged and the proceeds devoted to war charities.

HANS WAGNER GAVE THE PRISON WARDEN PUP TO ESCAPE CELL.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Pittsburgh, June 8.—Hans Wagner, baseball star, is a chicken fancier and dog-breeder as well as shortstop superior, basketball-tosser par excellence and fisherman with a patience as unending as his skill.

Recently when he paid the Allegheny county jail a visit, Warden Edward Lewis locked him in a dungeon cell for a joke. After enjoying the darkness and the general scrubableness for a while, Honus began to rail. Finally he remembered that Lewis had offered vainly on several occasions to make a dog swap with him and in desperation he called out:

"Say, Ed, let me out of here and I'll give you that thoroughbred for the bullpup."

"Bargain," said Lewis, grinning, as he turned the big key.

EASTERN OHIO MINING DISTRICT RESEMBLES ALASKA

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Zanesville, Ohio, June 8.—A trip through the Eastern Ohio mining district brings memories of Alaskan novels, for the most spectacular feature of the district is the use of dog teams. The mines in Muskingum county are of the three-foot vein, and it is almost impossible to use mules, horses or machinery in the entries, so dogs have been substituted, the huskies pulling the loaded cars along the tracks. Nearly 200 dogs are working in the mines in this one county.

Most of the dogs are owned by the miners, who take great pride in the "huskies" and frequently stage dog races between teams.

The huskies, of no particular breed, must weigh from 35 to 50 pounds, for the work. They are valued at from $5 to $15 each.

BULK OF LANE ESTATE BEQUEATHED TO GALLERIES.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

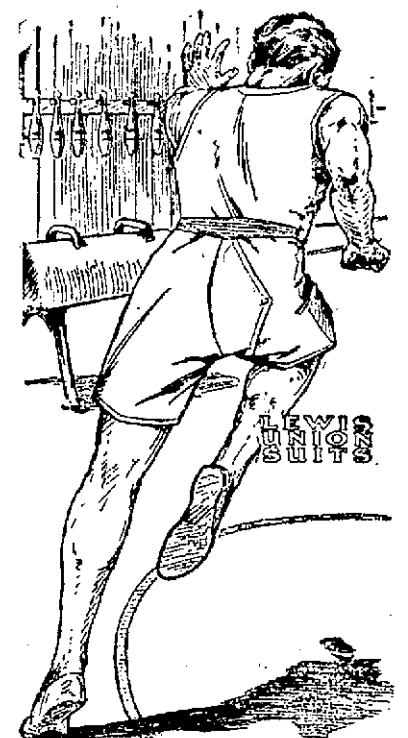

Dublin, June 8.—It is announced that the bulk of the estate of Sir Hugh Lane, the wealthy Irish art expert who was lost on the Lusitania, is bequeathed to galleries in Dublin.

and London. The principal items in the estate are the collections of paintings.

Over $5,000 will be spent in preparing Columbia's south field for football next fall, according to Manager Walter Dwyer, who says that the field will be plowed up, graded and resodded. Stands to accommodate several thousand more spectators will be built. The Columbia Football association hasn't any money, but naturally expects to have some hereafter. Tom Thorpe is the most favored candidate for the coaching position.

Charlie Hickman, who would have given the suffragets a lot of worry if he were still walloping those long drives in big league parks, has landed deep in the sticks after twenty years of major league baseball. He has signed a three-year contract to coach the baseball team of the University of West Virginia.

From Raw Wool and Buttons To The Finished Product.

No matter whether you need underwear or whether you want two piece or Union Suits, you should see this display for the interesting educational phases it presents. It shows in detail all the material incorporated in the making of a high grade Lewis Union Suit such as the Raw Wool, Cleaned Wool, Worsted on Cops, Salt Water Pearl Buttons, Knitted Cones, Mercerized Thread, Cleaned Cotton and partially Drawn out Cotton in addition to the various models of the finished garments.

But few people realize that the Lewis Underwear (made in Janesville) has captured every first prize at all the World's Expositions since the one held in Chicago in 1893, for quality, workmanship and fit.

Being a home product and the manufacturers paying out thousands of dollars for labor each year, which in turn is spent in Janesville is it any more than right that the people of Janesville should wear Lewis Union Suits? They are really less expensive.

We've sold Lewis Garments for over 15 years without a single kick.

THE PASSING OF BRYAN.

But is it the passing of Bryan? Is the resignation of the secretary of state and the acceptance by the president, the real passing of the "Silver-Tongued Orator of the Platte"? Is it the political end of the man who was crucified on the cross of the gold in 1896? Is it the end, politically, of the man who thrice ran for the office of president of the United States, and then, finally, when the crown was within his reach, with the republican party hopelessly split by the Chicago convention, threw his influence to Woodrow Wilson, betraying his friend to no end?

In the "Passing of the Third Story Back" ever, the audiences showed signs of regretting such a character should walk quietly out of the door and pass into the great beyond without a tribute. In the passing of William Jennings Bryan from the portfolio of secretary of state, is there such a sympathetic audience to regret his passage?

Bryan has played the position of secretary of state for all that could be obtained from the office. He has dominated Wilson, he has covered his weaker associates in the cabinet, to such an extent that it must be with a sigh of relief that the president actually accepted his resignation and prepared to mould a new official cabinet.

William Jennings Bryan is one of the metric characters that appear in the political firmament from time to time. His rise to prominence was due to a mistake of the democratic party in 1896, when the free silver craze was at its height. When men today good, solid citizens were swept away by the great cry of "Sixteen to One," they did not understand the full import of the slogan, but it was a catch word that caught their fancy. From a simple Illinois lawyer he has risen to be a person of political importance in this country.

Three times a candidate for president on the democratic ticket, he brought about the defeat for nomination of Champ Clark, a democrat of the old line stripe of democracy, for Woodrow Wilson, at the Baltimore convention, by sheer manipulation of the delegates there assembled. Bryan to many was a political demi-god, and he acted the part.

Woodrow Wilson, elected president of the United States through the unfortunate split in the republican ranks due to a misunderstanding of principles, named him as his secretary of state. It is not here nor there to say that he was no more fitted for this position than it would be to claim on house tops that black was white. Until he handed his resignation to the president on Tuesday he has dominated the state department and has led this country into countless inconvenient and uncomfortable positions through his propaganda of peace at any cost, and ignorance of international law.

His resignation now is due to the fact that he could not dominate the note that President Wilson is about to send to Germany. His resignation was accepted by the president, we are informed, as soon as delivery there by enhancing the appreciation of cool and judicious treatment of the affair at hand on the part of our president which the American people now feel everthing from free silver down and up to. He is now posing as a peace pacifist. He is also a firm adherent to the doctrine of "grape juice" unfermented. This can, perhaps, be traced back to the opposition by the liquor interests, but give him his due he is consistent. Perhaps it may be said that his value as a chautauqua lecturer, free from any entanglement of cares of the office of the state department, may give him an opportunity to reap the golden shekels that otherwise might go to some other "agency" has led to this step? Base be thought.

William Jennings Bryan resigned from the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson because he found that he was confronted by a stronger mind than his own. That he could not influence a man whose decision was already made. A man in whom the nation as a whole has confidence in at this critical period. He found that his petty and speculative policy would no longer meet the demands of the public who seek active and upholding of the dignity of the United States.

sorrow for him, but his usefulness as a secretary of state at this critical period has been the subject of editorial comment from both democratic and republican press. He retires under fire, as it were, and while he may claim a principle his retirement is welcomed and is glad and joyous tidings for the average press of the country to announce.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor Philipp has a mission to fulfill. He has promised the people of the state of Wisconsin a business administration. He has promised them a decided reduction of the state taxes. He has men in the assembly and senate who are there to aid him. He has Speaker Whitteit in the assembly. He has Everett, he has Hambrecht, he has Kabusta, he has Krell, he has Herrington, he has Winegar and dozens of others who seek only to serve the people as they would be served. In the senate he is basing his hopes on Fairchild, on Perry, on Burke, on Waltem, on Cunningham, on Ackley, on Everett and others of the same stripe who believe the platform they were elected on really means what it said. Today he sends a special message to the legislature on a measure he considers vital to the state as a whole. It has been opposed by a special lobby, hired and taught carefully what to say and what not to say, a lobby so incensed that it would be hard to place your finger on the real head and front. A lobby that would undo the work of the last campaign for their own personal gain. The Milwaukee Free Press calls attention to a lobby that exists at Madison that does not exist at any other state capital. It calls attention to the influence the university professors and their better halves can wield upon legislation by more suggestion. It calls attention to the fact no other state capital has its university so closely affiliated with its state government as in Wisconsin. No state legislature has such a convenient way of spending its spare moments as in the company of clever university professors or their wives. True, this is so, but the men at Madison, were sent there to make laws and not to beguile their spare moments with false Deliahs or clever word doctors.

The Gazette believes the present legislators are men who see their duty and mean to accomplish the ends they were sent to work out. The great end, the reduction of taxes, is sufficient reward for every legislator and he needs not the smiles and approval of the "wardens" for doing his duty and discharging it possible, the state university from politics. Demos and the Professor is a high sounding title, but Demos is the taxpayer and not the pictorial creature that the Nation would have us believe in the article written by a biased "observer" who has so long sucked the public "pap" that he can not separate theory from fact.

Bryan has retired to private life and the chautauqua platform and the country breathes a sigh of relief. His retirement at this time, however, is unfortunate, as it may lead to the belief that the nation does not stand behind the president in his foreign policy. In plain words, Bryan's desertion just at this time would be criminal if it were not such a decided relief to the country as a whole.

His "Daughter-in-Law."

My husband and I had just been married and my small brother-in-law overheard his mother refer to me as "my daughter-in-law." A short time after that the little fellow visited me in my new home, and upon sending him to the store the groceryman, seeing he was a stranger, said: "Well, little boy, I have never seen you before. Do you live in this neighborhood?" "No, sir," said the child, "but my daughter-in-law lives across the street and I am visiting her."

To Prevent Magneto Knocks.

There are several methods of steadying the running of the magneto armature and preventing the tendency to knock. Possibly the most efficacious of these is the fitting of a small fly-wheel to the magneto shaft, or fitting a brake drum with a small brake pad constantly in contact. These tend to keep the driving pinions up to their work, and prevent the sudden jerk that ensues after the magneto armature passes its maximum position.

To Prevent Leaky Manifolds.

Nothing is more exasperating than the persistent leaking of a flange joint on the manifold, where copper is used for the gasket. The trouble, however, nearly always can be remedied by cutting a groove around the post with a cold chisel and another around the hole in the flange. When the studs which hold the manifold in place are drawn up, the gasket is compressed and partially fills the grooves, sealing the joint.

Destructive Starfish.

Clearing Narragansett bay of that voracious enemy of the oyster, clam and scallop, the starfish, is one of the principal recommendations of the commissioners of shell fisheries in the annual report just presented to the general assembly. Many acres of free ground—17,000 acres are exempt by law—are described as only breeding places for the starfish, which during the past year destroyed a million bushels of oysters besides ravaging the beds of clams and scallops. So serious a menace to the shellfish industry is the starfish that the revenue of the state from leased oyster grounds is being affected. The starfish set during June and July. Immense numbers are found upon seaweed. It is estimated that the starfish in one carload of seaweed are capable of destroying over six million clams in one week. Raking the seaweed ashore is one way of killing the starfish by the million.—Providence Bulletin.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH K. CAMERON

THE TWO BOOKS.

"I imagine music must make feelings and paint pictures in the minds of the people who hear it according to their own nature as much as according to the music itself. The musician might compose something wanting you to think of the Holy Grail and some people who heard it might think of a prayer meeting, and some would think of how good they were themselves, and a boy might think of himself at the head of a solemn procession carrying a banner in the music he'd think of a crown."—Death of King.

The other day I heard two women arguing about a book.

One said it was a wonderful book and so true to life.

The other couldn't see anything in it at all.

Each considered it "so strange" that the other didn't feel as she did about the book.

They weren't talking about the same book.

But as I listened I didn't think it strange at all. You see, they weren't talking about the same book. They thought they were and it was the same book in one way but not in another. They had read the same book but they weren't talking about the same book each was talking about was the experience and poured her own emotions into the vocabulary of her own words.

And as they were women of widely differing experience each read a very different translation of the same book.

Even the simplest thing we read we translate with our own experiences as vocabulary. A newspaper clipping, a love poem, a Bible story, in everyone's mind each of these arouses different mental pictures. The news story of a wedding, for instance, must mean something entirely different to the girl who looks forward to her wedding and the old woman who looks back to hers.

Our Old Furnace.

Again, when I read about Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego in the fiery furnace I see them standing in the distinctly cramped quarters of our old furnace.

And so into everything we read we pour our own experience. What wonder that no two people like the same books. What wonder that the story that is beautiful to me is meaningless to my neighbor. He can never read the story that I read. I can never read that other story that awakens and thrills him.

For many men, many minds, is just another way of saying, many men, many experiences.

Household Hint

PREVENTS ACHING BACK.

The "handy man of the house" has saved me numberless backaches by extending the hot water line from the stationary tank to a position directly above the laundry stove, which stands close beside the tub.

This simple arrangement saves all lifting connected with filling the wash boiler.

A second-hand faucet was used, making the expense very slight.

ICE BOX ACCESSORY.

Doubtless many housewives have suffered much annoyance as a result of the grating of the shelves in an ice box being far enough apart to cause cups or cream pitchers to upset when moving them about, soiling the contents to the floor of the box.

This trouble can be overcome by fitting to the shelves wire window screening which may be enameled or not, as desired.

This makes a solid foundation for all food receptacles, and yet permits the free passage of air through the box.

STUFFED ONIONS.

Peel onions, scoop out portion, parboil five minutes, turn upside down to drain. Fill with stuffing made of equal parts of nuts, meat and bread crumbs and onion chopped fine. Fill onion heating, fill and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake till tender in pan with one inch of water.

FROZEN DISHES.

Plain Ice Cream—Cold mixture.

quart rich milk that has been heated almost to boiling, beating all the while; then put in whites of eight eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Then other contents in a pan set inside another containing ice and water, and beat about fifteen minutes, or until it is as thick as a boiled custard, stirring steadily meanwhile. Pour into a bowl to cool. When quite cool, beat cream and five teaspoons vanilla, or into it three pints of rich sweet cream and five teaspoons vanilla, or such other flavoring as you prefer. Put it into a pan having a close fitting cover and pack in pounded ice and rock salt about three-quarters full, before putting the ice on top of the cover beat the custard as you would batter, for five minutes steady; then put on cover and put the ice and salt over it, and cover the whole with a thick mat, blanket or carpet and let it stand for an hour. Then carefully uncover and scrape from the bottom and sides of the pan the thick coating of frozen custard, beat again very hard, until the custard is a smooth but creamy paste. Do this thoroughly, ut on the cover, ice, salt and blanket and leave it for five hours, replenishing the ice and salt if necessary.

THE TABLE.

Asparagus Loaf.—One cup cooked asparagus, one-half cup chopped cooked veal, one cup gravy or white sauce. Mix well together, add three well-beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Pour into greased pudding dish, set dish in pan of hot water and bake until firm.

Chicken Veal.—Have veal strip, pad from the shank, cut in pieces large enough to serve, boil in salted water until very tender; roll in flour and fry the same as chicken. If desired, cooked peas may be heated in the skillet after the meat has been taken out and served as a garnish for the meat.

Creamed Dried Beef With Boiled Eggs.—Make a white sauce of one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, one large cup milk. Add to this five cents' worth of dried beef cut small and two hard-boiled eggs cut into small pieces. Serve on toast.

MARRIAGE BROKING TRADE IS PROHIBITED BY EGYPTIAN COURT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Cairo, June 9.—Marriage broking, a remunerative trade under the old regime, has received a blow in the court of Egypt, which threw out a suit for $125 made by a woman against a Moslem couple. In its findings, the court read a lecture to the broker. While bringing persons together with the idea of marriage is a commendable thing to do, said the court, its virtue is lost when done purely for gain.

WOMEN AS MOTORMEN ON BERLIN STREET CARS

Berlin, June 9.—Women as motormen on the Berlin street cars, in addition to the hundreds already serving as conductors while their husbands are in the field, are now in prospect. Women also are to replace men at the various railroad stations, where the main duty is to punch the ticket of travelers as they make for their trains or take them up as they leave the platforms. The latter work is not strenuous and it is believed it can be performed easily by the women.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a manicurist in the only barber shop in town that hires girls to do manicure work. I have spent six months in learning manicuring evenings while working behind a dry goods counter in the daytime. I have worked in the barber shop now for a month and I like the work. My employer is a good man to work for, pays me a salary of $15 a week and gives me plenty of time off and even sends me home some evenings when he thinks trade will be slack.

I do object to the actions of certain of his customers. They try to flirt with me while I am trying my best to work on their hands, and really they get me nervous. One party has insulted me on several occasions, so I am thinking of giving up my job on account of the manners of the men.

I am quite sure my employer notices the behavior of these people, because he has walked into the manicuring parlor twice while these men were speaking rudely to me. I feel it won't do much good to ask him to tell these men to stop coming to the barber shop. If I quit, I have no other place to go here where they employ manicurists, so I would have to leave town, which I don't want to do and leave mother. Do you think I should talk to my employer about these men and demand what I think to be my rights before really quitting?

Almost every working girl has to put up with insults and the sooner she learns to ignore them the better. You become nervous when the men are discourteous to you, because you are new at the work. Make up your mind not to let the insults bother you and "change a stony reserve" while working on men whose manners are rude and insulting. Have a friendly talk with your employer and tell him that you would like to be treated with courtesy by the men. He might ask them to respect your wishes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Kindly give me your advice, as I am losing the best part of my life. Although I am eighteen years old I have no girl friends, and have no enjoyment in a girl my age should have. I quit school when I was only fourteen years old and have stayed home ever since, helping mother with the housework and cooking. As my mother is sickly I am staying at it still. If I worked I should have all sorts of friends. I have not even a neighborhood girl friend whom I could spend Sunday with. What can I do to get acquainted with girls, as I am lonely. I am not pretty, nor am I homely. Although I have no friends to go with I am contented. On Sunday I am with mother and father and we go to some movie play. The movie theater where I go is situated just beyond a dance hall. At night if we want to dance hall where they are always some girls around, they cast some remarks about my being a stickler, and about my clothes. I make believe I do not notice them, but it hurts my feelings to think of it. I am the only girl, but can't afford high-priced things. I suppose if I wore loud clothes I would have all the friends I'd want. I see so many girls who are loud and they have friends enough, but I know what is right and wrong. I always try to act like a lady wherever I go.

Go to the Young Women's Christian Association and talk to one of the women there. They have classes of various kinds. You could join one you liked and in that way come in touch with a very fine type of girls. The class would not take much of your time. Why not become a regular attendant at some church? You could get acquainted with nice young people in that way.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am eighteen years old. Am I too young to go out with a boy?

(2) What is a good and instant remedy for cold sores?

(3) If you receive a May basket, should you call in the givers and entertain them?

(4) No.

(5) There is no instant remedy for cold sores. Turpentine is as good as anything to use on them.

(6) Yes.

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"Dick," said Nell as she met her husband at the door, "that Ellison woman has gotten Olive's home address and has written a letter to her parents, a regular poison pen letter, telling them about the 'immoral' society into which we have introduced her to come home."

"Does he believe we would do a thing like that?" exclaimed Dick. "Will he take the word of a person who would write an anonymous letter against friends he knows?"

"He doesn't know what to think," but says she has seen him here so long he wants her, and she's going. I hate to have her go, but I hate worse to have that woman think she has succeeded in driving her away. I wish she could stay a little longer on that account, if for nothing else."

"So she's scared you out?" Dick remarked as Olive came down the stairs.

"Not for a minute. I am simply retiring to fortifications," laughed Olive. "The doctor doesn't need to know about this, does he? Poor man, he has had trouble enough."

"I know," said Nell, "but he must be informed of every move of the enemy. It looks as if the postmaster were an accomplice. How else could Mrs. Ellison get the address?"

"How does she think of so many things to do?" Olive sat with her chin in her hand, looking into the fire.

"She's a clever woman and her mind is bent on harassing the doctor," answered the poison-bitterness of her heart upon him, said Nell sadly. "I tell you, she's so feared."

"Well, if my lady thinks she can intimidate me she is doomed to disappointment. She is making the doctor positively attractive by the wall of mystery and excitement she is building around him. She has thrown down the gauntlet; I pick it up. And so we forget a lifelong trouble for ourselves."

The maid came into the dining room to lay the cloth for dinner as Olive delivered this speech with appropriate gestures.

"Well, have the Parsons and doctor and his sister over to dinner tomorrow night; you will not go till Wednesday. Can't you explain by letter and stay a few days longer?" begged Nell.

"Letters are no good in a case like this. I could fill a mail pouch and get nowhere. When I get Daddy in the morning chair and I sit on the arm and look into his face, that's something like it. I can make him see light. Dear old Daddy! I'm sorry to have this come at the end of my visit."

"I told you that woman—"

"Nell!" Olive shook her playfully by the shoulders. "You surely would not be guilty to saying 'I told you so.' I'll send a letter to Daddy tonight, telling him when to meet me."

Give the Children Crisco Foods

CRISCO

Crisco foods taste as good as they look and what is most important, they are digestible.

Crisco cookies, doughnuts, gingerbread, etc., are good for children, because Crisco is a pure and absolutely all vegetable cooking fat. It is the cream of food oils, made possible by the discovery of the scientific "Crisco Process."

CRISCO

For Frying—For Shortening—For Cake Making

makes fried foods more delicious and wholesome. It makes digestible pie crust. Crisco cake is as rich as the most expensive butter cake.

Try Crisco in your favorite recipe. For shortening, use a little less than you would of butter or lard and in cake making, cream it thoroughly. Use plenty for deep frying, for the same Crisco can be used over and over.

Additional Crisco Facts

Crisco takes proper frying temperature without smoking up the kitchen. You can fry fish, then onions, then potatoes in the same Crisco, merely by straining out the food particles after each frying.

Crisco, in place of butter in cookies, cakes, scalloped dishes, etc., gives proper richness at much less expense. Salt should be added when used in place of butter.

"To be sure. I suppose you signed the letter?"

"Certainly."

"That was a mistake. You must rewrite it, leaving out your name, and send it. All you need to say is that the man who robbed the Bayou State Security is escaping on the Belle Julie; that he is disguised as a deckhand, and that his name on the steamer's books is John Wesley Gavitt. That will be amply sufficient."

"She was silent for a moment. Then: 'Why mustn't I sign it? They will pay no attention to an anonymous letter. And, besides, it seems so—so cowardly.'"

"They will telegraph to every river landing ahead of us within an hour

"One Moment, if You Please."

after your letter reaches New Orleans; you needn't doubt that. And the suppression of your name isn't cowardly; it is merely a justifiable bit of self-protection. It is your duty to give the alarm; but when you have done that, your responsibility ceases. There are plenty of people who can identify me if I am taken back to New Orleans. You don't want to be named as a witness, and you can't be."

She saw the direct, manlike wisdom of all this, and was quick to appreciate his delicate tact in effacing the question of the reward without even referring to it. But his stoicism was almost appalling.

"It is very shocking!" she murmured; "only you don't seem to realize it at all."

"Don't I? You must remember that I have been arguing from your point of view. My own is quite unchanged. It is your duty to do what you must do; it is my affair to avert the consequences to myself if I can manage it without taking an unfair advantage of your frankness."

"What will you do?"

"It would be bad faith now for me to try to run away from the steamer, I meant to do. So far, you have found me by your candor. But beyond that I make no promises. My parole will be at an end when the officers appear, and I shall do what I can to dodge, or to escape if I am taken. Is that fair?"

"It is more than fair; I can't understand."

"What is it that you can't understand?"

"How you can do this; how you can do such things as the one you did last night, and still—"

He finished the sentence for her—and still be a common robber of banks, and the like. I fancy it is a bit puzzling—from your point of view. Sometimes, perhaps, we shall all understand things better than we do now, but to that time, and beyond it, I shall be your grateful debtor for what you have done tonight. May I go now?"

She gave him leave, and when he was gone, she went to her stateroom where he had suggested. An hour later she gave the newly written letter to the night clerk; and the thing was done.

In the ordinary course of things, Miss Farnham's letter should have reached New Orleans in time to have procured Griswold's arrest at any one of a score of landings south of Memphis. When the spies of the Tennessee metropolis disappeared to the southward, he began to think that her resolution had failed.

He had no means of knowing that she had given her letter to the night clerk within the hour of their interview on the saloon deck promenade; nor did he, or anyone else, know that it had lain unnoticed and overlooked on the clerk's desk until the Belle Julie reached Cairo. Such, however, was the pregnant fact; and to this purely accidental delay Griswold owed his first sight of the chief city of Missouri lying dim and shadowy under its mantle of coal smoke.

The Belle Julie made her landing in the early evening, and Charlotte was busy up to the last moment getting her own and her aunt's belongings ready for the transfer to the upper river steamer on which they were to complete their journey to Minnesota. Hence, it was not until the Belle Julie was edging her way up to the stone-paved levee that Charlotte broke her self-imposed rule and slipped out upon the port promenade.

The swing stage was poised in the air ready to be lowered, and two of the deckhands were dropping from the shore end to trail the bowline up the paved slope to the nearest mooring ring. There was an electric arc light opposite the steamer's berth, and Charlotte shaded her eyes with her hands to follow the motions of the two bent figures under the dripping hawser.

One of the men was wearing a cap, and there was a small bundle hanging at his belt. She recognized him at once. At the mooring ring he was the one who stooped to make the line fast, and the other, a negro, stood aside. At that moment the landing stage fell, and in the confusion of debarkation which promptly followed, the thrilling bit of play at the mooring ring passed unnoticed by all save the silent watcher on the saloon deck.

While the man in the cap was still on his knees, two men stole from the shadow of the nearest freight pyramid and flung themselves upon him. He fought fiercely for a moment, and though he was more than doubly outweighed, rose to his feet, striking out viciously and dragging his assailants up with him. In the struggle the bundle dropped from his belt, and Charlotte saw him kick it aside. The waiting negro caught it deftly and vanished among the freight pyramids; whereupon one of the attacking pair wrenching himself out of the three-man scuffle and darted away in pursuit.

This left but a single antagonist for the fugitive, and Charlotte's sympathies deserted her convictions for the moment. But while she was biting her lip to keep from crying out, the fugitive stepped back and held out his hands, and she saw the gleam of polished metal reflecting the glare of the arc light when the officer snapped the handcuffs upon his wrists.

It was with a distinct sense of culpability oppressing her that she went back to her aunt, and she was careful not to let the invalid see her face. Fortunately, there was a thing to be done, and the transfer to the other steamer came opportunely to help her to re-establish the balance of things distorted.

She was sorry, but, after all, the man had only himself to blame. None the less, the wish that someone else might have been his betrayer was promising to grow later into remorseful and lasting regret when, with her aunt, she left the Belle Julie and walked up the levee to go aboard the Star of the North.

CHAPTER VII.

Moses Ichthyophagus.

After suffering all the pangs of those who lose between the touch and the clutch, Griswold had found the red-handkerchief bundle precisely where it had been hidden, and was buried safely in the deckload of sacked coffee on the engine-room guard.

It came to light in the final half-hour of the voyage, when he and his mates were transferring the coffee to the main deck, forward. It had not been disturbed; and what had happened was obvious enough, after the fact. After its hiding, arm-length deep, in a cranny between the sacks, some sudden jar of the boat had slightly shifted the cargo, closing one cranny and opening another.

With the money once more in his possession he had a swift return of the emotions which had thrilled him when he found himself standing on the sidewalk in front of the Bayou State Security with the block of bank notes under his arm.

As to the battle for the keeping which was probably awaiting him at the St. Louis landing, the prospect of coming to blows, man-fashion, with the enemy, was not wholly unwelcome.

The few necessary preliminaries were arranged while the Belle Julie was backing and filling for the landing. Since to be taken with the money in his possession was to give the enemy the chance of winning at one stroke both the victory and the spoils, he made a confederate of the negro, whose part he had taken in the quarrel with McGrath. The man was grateful and loyal according to his gifts, and Griswold's need was too pressing to stick at any trifle of un-intelligence.

"Mose, you'll go ashore with me on the spring line," he said, when he found his man at the heel of the landing stage.

"Yes, sub, Mars' Gravitt; dat's me, sholy."

"All right. You see this bundle. If anybody tackles me while we're making fast, I'm going to drop it, and you must get it and run away. Do you understand?"

"What-all mus' I do when I's done tuk out wild hit?"

"Get away, first; then keep out of sight and hang around the levee for an hour or two. If I don't turn up before you get tired, pitch the thing into the river and go about your business. If you open it, I'll conjure you worse than any Obi-man you ever heard of."

"No, sub! I ain't gwine open hit, Cay'm—not if dey's cumjah in hit; no, sub!"

"Well, there is—the worst kind of conjure this old world has ever known. But it won't hurt you if you don't meddle with it. Keep your wits about you and be ready to grab it and run. Here we go."

The pilot had found his wharfage and was edging the Belle Julie up to it. The bow men paid out slack, and Griswold and the black, dropping from the swinging stage, trailed the end of the wet hawser up to the nearest mooring ring. Griswold bade the negro keep watch and knelt to knot the hawser in the ring. While the negro sentinel was stammering, "L-lockout, Mars' Cap'm!" the trap was sprung.

In deference to the upcoming passenger from the Belle Julie, the two man catchers tried to do their job quietly. But Griswold would not have it so, and he was up and had twisted himself free when a blow from a clubbed pistol drove him back to his knees. Half stunned by the clubbing, he still made shift to spring about again, to drop his handkerchief bundle and kick it aside, and to close with his assailants while the negro was snatching up the treasure and darting away among the freight pyramids. After that he had but one thought; to keep the two plain-clothes men busy until the negro had made his escape. Even this proved to be a forlorn hope, since the smaller of the two instantly broke away to give chase, while the other stepped back, spun his weapon in air, and leveled it.

Rage-blinded as he was, Griswold knew that the leveled pistol meant surrender or death. When his captor had handcuffed him and was walking him toward a closed carriage drawn up before the nearest saloon in the river-fronting street, he ventured to ask what he was wanted for.

"You'll find that out soon enough," was the curt reply, and nothing more was said until the carriage was reached and the door had been jerked open. "Get in!" commanded the majesty of the law, and when the door was slammed upon the captive, the plain-clothes man turned to the driver, a little wizened Irishman with a face like a shriveled winter apple. "What time does that New Orleans fast train pull out?"

Griswold heard the reply: "Sixty-four-five, sorr, and something in the thin, piping voice gave him fresh courage. Through the open window of the carriage he saw his captor glance at his watch and begin an impatient sentry beat up and down under the electric transparency advertising the particular brand of whiskey specialized by the saloon. He was evidently waiting for his colleague to bring in the negro, and time passed.

The spring evening was raw and chilly, and the open doors of the saloon volleyed light and warmth and a beckoning invitation. Griswold's gift, prostituted to the service of the changed point of view, bade him read in the red face, the loose lip and the bibulous eyes the temptation that was gripping the plain-clothes man.

By a careful contention of the manacled hands, which seemed suddenly to have become endowed with the crafty deftness of the hands of a pick-pocket, he found his working capital in a pocket of the short-sleeved coat.

It had been diminished only by the hundred dollars put into John Gavitt's hands, and the twenty he had given the negro. He wished he might have had a glimpse of the little Irish cabman's face. Since he had not, he made two hundred dollars of the money into a compact roll and put the remainder back into the inner pocket.

It was only a minute or two after this that the red-faced man's impatience blossomed into the thirst that will not be denied, and he went into the saloon to get a drink, first putting the cabman on guard.

"Get down here and keep an eye on this dicky-bird," he ordered. "Slug him if he tries to make a break."

"But the cabman hung back. 'I'm no fightin' man, sorr; an', besides, I don't dare lave me harrased,' he objected. But the officer broke in angrily.

"What the devil are you afraid of? He's got the clamps on, and couldn't hurt you if he wanted to. Come down here!"

Dr. James came out of the sick room, and, approaching Mrs. Dixon, said:

Mrs. Dixon, that your husband will recover."

"What, dear doctor?" cried Mrs. Dixon, "what shall I do?"

"Why, what do you mean?" inquired the physician, in surprise. "Aren't you glad?"

"Yes," sobbed Mrs. Dixon, "only when you said last week that I didn't think he would live more than two weeks, I went and sold all his clothes."

When May was three years old she was taken to church for the first time. She immediately became very restless and was determined to stand up on the cushioned pew. Her mother endeavored to hold her close to herself, but the little girl struggled and finally began to cry.

"Why, May," said the mother, losing her patience, "can't you be quiet like a good little girl?"

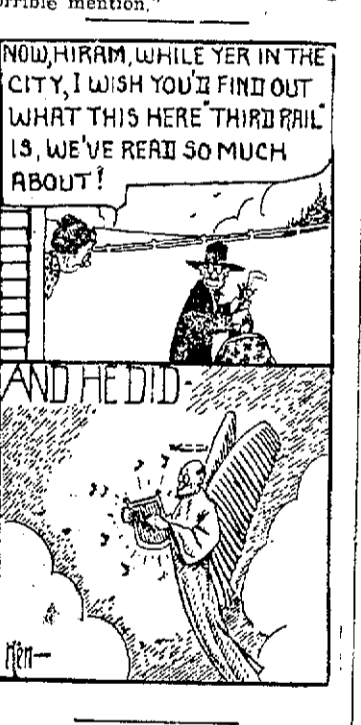

"I can't see it," replied May, "an' I want to get up so I can."

"What is it that you want to see so badly?" queried the mother.

"Why, mother," said the little child, "I can hear the organ grind, and I see the man coming for the pennies; but I cannot see the money."

On the last day of school, prizes were distributed at Peter's school. When the little boy returned home, the mother was entertaining callers. "Well, Peter," asked one of the callers, "did you get a prize?"

"Yes," replied Peter, "but I got horrible mention."

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery.

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those single Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemists. They come in 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.—Advertisement.

INSURANCE RATE HIGH COMPARED WITH LOSS

JANESVILLE PROPERTY-OWNERS PAY $1,006 FOR EACH $100 LOSS IN 1914.

EKERN IN STATEMENT

State Insurance Commissioner Claims That People of Wisconsin Are Being Overcharged.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 8.—Janesville had a fire loss of $7,023.40 during 1914. The sworn reports of the insurance companies to Commissioner of Insurance Herman L. Ekers, giving these figures also show that these companies collected $7,063.45 in premiums from the policyholders in this city. This means $1,006.05 in premiums for each $100 returned for losses. During 1913, inclusive, the total premiums paid in this city amounted to $293,570.45 and the total returned for losses was $224,653.75, which makes a premium payment of $130.70 for each $100 returned for losses.

Reasons for Difference.

Fire Chief H. C. Kleins records show losses of $7,000 for 1914. Commenting on these figures showing losses and premiums, Ekers said: "The insurance companies' figures are the amounts which they have paid out for losses. There will be differences between their figures and the fire department records in that losses often exceed the amount of insurance. On the other hand, the insurance companies pay many small losses for which the fire department is not called out. Differences also arise from the fact that the fire department records are made up from the losses as they occur, while the insurance company losses are paid, which often would cause the losses incurred in one year to be reported as paid the succeeding year. Cases have also been included where the insurance companies have included losses outside the city. This is an injustice to the city in the excess losses so shown, and the figures are now being investigated to correct any errors.

"The 215 cities and villages in Wisconsin having fire departments had a population in 1910 of 1,139,518. During 1914 these cities and villages paid $8,701,065 in premiums and received in return $3,152,054 for losses. The people thus paid in premiums $212.64 for each $100 returned for losses. From 1911 to 1914, inclusive, the premiums paid were $25,949,637 and the losses paid were $11,161,270, making the premium payment $230.15 for each $100 returned for losses. The city and village per capita loss in 1914 was $2.63, and for the four years $2.33.

Stock Companies Get Business.

"The great mass of insurance in cities and villages is written by the stock fire insurance companies. Probably less than 1-10 is written by mutuals, Lloyds and interinsurers. The business of the stock companies is therefore of particular interest. The figures show that even with a general excessive fire loss during 1914, the loss rate in Wisconsin is much less than that throughout the United States, and a comparison of premium payments to losses in Wisconsin shows that the people of Wisconsin are still being compelled to pay more than their share of the fire insurance premiums.

Fire losses will fluctuate. A city having a good record may have an excessive loss for one or more years, but given a large territory or reasonable period of time, the losses will average. During the ten years 1905-1914, the people of Wisconsin have paid the stock fire insurance corporations over $70,000,000 in premiums and received for losses less than $31,000,000, and Wisconsin policyholders have paid $229 in premiums for each $100 of losses, against $178 paid on the average throughout the United States.

Causes Excessive.

"The people of Wisconsin are being overcharged. This is wrong. Wisconsin leads in fire prevention work, for which the fire departments are entitled to the principal credit. This work can not fail to greatly reduce losses. That it has done so is shown by comparison with other states. The fire departments are entitled to generous recognition and support by the people for their stores and factories in this state are protected by automatic sprinklers. Fully justifiable reductions in insurance premiums to 1/2 or even 1-10 of the present cost within three to eight years. But the great mass of the people are more and more giving attention to greater care and better housekeeping. We have the best building code in the United States. Money is spent freely for better buildings and for improvements on old property. All these things reduce losses and the people are justly entitled to reductions in the insurance premiums, and without doubt the legislature will provide the necessary to give the people of the benefit of the fire prevention work they are doing.

Loss Rates Compared

"During 1914 the 339 stock fire insurance companies doing business in Wisconsin had a loss rate throughout the United States of 75.5% in Wisconsin policyholders throughout the United States thus paid $174.10 in premiums for each $100 returned for losses. This is pointed out by the experience of the Wisconsin stock companies which collected throughout the United States $175.80 in premiums while in Wisconsin they collected $335.60 for each $100 returned for losses.

"The farmers town mutual company record is all the time getting better. Nor is it an accident. During the ten years from 1905 to 1914 the town mutuals collected only $121.50 for each $100 paid for losses against $220.59 collected in Wisconsin by the stock companies.

"During the last four years these farmers' town companies collected in premiums from their policyholders only $115.90 on the average for each $100 paid back for losses against the average of $232.50 collected from Wisconsin policyholders by stock companies.

"Comparing 1914 the farmers' town companies collected in Wisconsin premiums of $1,038,619 and paid for losses $801,263, making $115.26 paid in premiums by the farmers for each $100 paid back for losses, as against the $174.10 paid by Wisconsin policyholders to stock companies."

Says Newspapers Made A Success Of His Business

P. J. Towle and His Sons Selected Wrong Means of Securing Country-Wide Distribution of Log Cabin Syrup.

FINALLY RESORTED TO NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

Pronounce It Only Means of Securing National Distribution.—Now Invest $150,000 Yearly in Newspaper Advertising.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

Theoretically, the man who "doesn't know when he's licked" is good laughing material. In real life he's an inspiration.

Frank Towle was telling me about his father, and unconsciously about himself, for his nick name, during his father's life time, was "Father's looking glass."

The windows of the Towles' offices overlook Lake Michigan, which on this particular day appeared little more than a limitless expanse of dull gray fog.

But the very dreariness of the prospect, and the tattoo of the rain hurrying itself against the windows, served merely to accentuate the shyness of our position. The atmosphere was highly conducive to the reviewing of old struggles in the light of a very satisfactory present.

Not Licked by Failure at 55.

"Father was originally a wholesale grocer," Frank Towle was saying. "In fact, he and his first partner were the first wholesale grocers in Chicago."

"He was a young man when he established that business, and gave thirty of the best years of his life to it. So you can imagine what a blow it was after thirty years of success to find himself set suddenly at the bottom of the ladder again, without the youth and enthusiasm that had Stakes Everything on Treasured Idea."

"It is no easy matter for a man of 55 to start life all over again, but while it stripped him of practically everything he had, he came out of the crash clean, and equipped with one thing he had not had at the beginning of his career: A well conceived and treasured idea."

"That idea was the blending after a certain formula, of cane and maple syrup, that would insure unvarying product—you know that two runs of raw maple syrup are seldom alike—and marketing it in this representing a log cabin."

The shape of the tin would identify his syrup for all time, and is still doing so, even in this age of glass bottles and always will. For tin can't injure pure syrup, and glass couldn't produce the same effect.

Restricted Advertising Causes Struggles.

"Everything combined to make it a pretty hard struggle for the first few years. The main difficulty was his not being able to advertise sufficiently. He was still investing only about $2,000 or $3,000 a year in advertising when we three boys became old enough to join him in his fight."

"We knew we must advertise more extensively, but even then, all four of us had the wrong idea."

Seeking Wide Distribution Through Magazine.

"Like a lot of other makers of a special product," he continued, "we had dreams of a country-wide distribution. And no doubt like many others, we thought the way to get it was through the magazines. So we plunged."

"We had selected the wrong way to get country-wide distribution. For a long time we couldn't realize it, or at least, wouldn't be convinced. In fact it is only in the last few years that we abandoned magazine advertising altogether, and set about in the right way."

Newspapers Accomplish Desired Distribution.

"Last year we invested $150,000 in advertising, and not one cent of it went into magazines."

"We put every penny of it into newspaper advertising—and next year we're going to invest more than that in newspaper advertising exclusively."

"Do you mean that they are bringing you your desired distribution?"

"Furthermore, they're the only medium that will bring it. That's not mere preaching—we've proved it—at the expense of thirty years' effort."

"So I don't hesitate to say that as far ahead as we can see, every cent of our advertising appropriation will continue to be placed where it does the most good—with the newspapers."

"Don't you use any other mediums at all?" I asked.

"We use neither bill boards, cards, nor magazines—nothing but newspapers." He returned.

Capital Increased to $500,000.

"Father's capital was $25,000," he continued, "We knew something was wrong. We were making a mistake somewhere, but we couldn't put our finger on the weak spot."

"Our present capital is $500,000, and we've made our brand and can be worth ten times that much. We've done it through the proper celebration we sent to the school and the result was a happy time for all."

John L. Fulton, who passed away yesterday morning, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, July 4, 1854, and came to America when five years of age.

Most of his life was spent in this city, although he was widely known throughout the state. At about four o'clock yesterday morning he complained of feeling ill and was given something warm to drink. He fell into a sleep from which he never awoke. He had been ill for several years and suffered much. Several times his condition was critical, but each time he rallied and was up and about, until the day of his death. He was held in high esteem by the Odd fellows and held high offices in that order. He is survived by his wife, two daughters by a former marriage, Mrs. T. K. Dor and Mrs. R. M. Rockwell, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Jessie McLaughlin.

MORRIS MILLER

Here's a fast young ball player on whom the big league scouts ought to fix their eyes. His name is Billy Quinn and he plays shortstop for the Christian Brothers' college team in St. Louis. On a recent afternoon, Quinn stole a base, establishing a record for base stealing. Quinn is a first baseman in a double-header in the first game against Cape Girardeau Normal, the fast, shortstop swiped six sacks, and in the second contest of the day against McKendree college, he got away with seven steals.

Connie Mack is wearing a great mystery around the young chap he is now using at second base while Larry is laid up. Connie is having the youngster play under the alias of Ryan. The wily Mack also refused to allow his "find" to stop at a hotel.

He made him go and live at the home of Ira Thomas. When the Phillys scribes scented a mystery about Ryan and noted what a fine game he played, they got busy, with the result that Ryan's discovery in the majors.

Keen boxing critics are none too sure that Jim Coffey can take a punch and like it. In his recent bout Jim Flynn clipped him on the chin and his legs shook under him and he is about to cave in. Previous to this bout Coffey and the same fellow when Charlie Welser.

solid punch over, only he went down for the count of eight. His youth and sturdy build account for his recuperative ability, but why he should apparently crumple so from a single punch is a mystery.

A new record for an extra-inning game was recently made in Cuba, in the opening of the Amateur National league, when the Athletics and Progresso teams played twenty innings, the score being 8 to 7 in favor of the Progressos.

The previous long-game record in Cuba was eighteen innings, made by the Havana and Almendares professional teams. An odd feature of the game was that the Athletics scored seven runs in the first two innings, only to be tied in the ninth and finally beaten out. Morin started the game for the Athletics, was batted from the box and a youngster named Coma succeeded him and held his opponents' runless for eighteen innings.

Jim Coffey, the Roscommon giant and heavyweight champion of Bronx county, New York city, will be Jess Willard's first opponent when the world's heavyweight champion is ready to reappear in the ring in defense of his recently acquired title.

Plans for the match have passed the sanction stage, as the Brighton Beach Sporting club, which holds forth at the old race course near the seaside, has proffered terms to the men and suggested Labor day afternoon as the time of conflict.

Manager Fred Clarke of the Pittsburgh club says the same quality shown in any line of business to be successful. "The boss must surround himself with able lieutenants and whole machinery must run smoothly."

"That sounds good, but the trick is in securing the hired men and knowing how far to let them go, especially when you hit a losing streak. When a manager applies business methods, he is usually criticized, and few good business men care to remain in baseball after the ups and downs of a five-year term.

In their endeavor to fill their parks with fans, the Federal league managers have been resorting to all sorts of advertising dodges. Their latest of advertising to stimulate wanting interest in the Terrapins there is to give away buttons with this inscription on them: "We've been there once. Have you?"

Gabby Lovell, Peter Compton and old John. This is helping give Kansas City the best slugger team in the American Association. The Kansas City crew is leading the A. A. in extra base hits with a total of 148 extra bases and slugging average of .412. They have poked out 37 homers, 17 triples and 63 doubles. Compton is second and Lovell third among the league sluggers and Titus ranks fifth.

That reputed-to-be great infield of the 1914 Portland club didn't stand the major league ruff very well. Bill Rodgers didn't look good enough for the Indians to keep, and Bancroft is the only one left.

Bancroft seems to be doing fairly well with the Phillies, but McCredie predicts he will be back on the coast before the season is over.

Whitted, the former Boston outfielder, who is now a member of the Phillies, but is incapacitated by reason of a fractured ankle, is a great admirer of George Stallings, for whom he played last season. "Stallings is a fighter and he makes all his players have that spirit, no matter if they are by nature inclined to be phlegmatic. He is a great fellow to play for because he knows the game and is appreciative, but he will not stand for loafing, and the player who does not give him his best efforts is sure not to have a pleasant time of it. But the young fellows who appreciate his efforts in their interests, as I did, must agree that Stallings is a wonderful manager and will develop players more rapidly than the average man in charge of a team."

There is no question that Ray Morgan is playing better ball this spring than ever before since he joined the Nationals. Morgan has learned how to play his position at second base. He is giving the playing of his position intelligent consideration. He is covering a lot of ground because of the fact that he is watching the catchers' signals and playing the percentage on the batters. With a right-handed batter up, for instance, and a fast ball, it is more apt to go toward right than is a curve ball, and Morgan sets himself accordingly, and consequently gets a better start when it is necessary to cover a lot of ground.

Labor Troubles Rivals the War As Vital Problem To England

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Washington, June 9.—The dislocation of labor is the biggest problem England has on her hands next to a successful conclusion of the war, and even now the labor situation is receiving nearly as much attention from the newspapers and thoughtful public of England as the war.

This sentence is the summary of a long interview with Bruno Lasker of York, England, author of several works on labor problems, who is now in this country making a study of the conditions of industrial efficiency and public works for the War Relocation Authority.

Mr. Lasker is the confidential secretary of Mr. Rowntree and the latter is a very close personal friend and advisor of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lord George. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Lasker can speak with considerable authority of the labor situation in England today and of the attitude and purposes of the Liberal Government with regard to the labor problem.

Mr. Lasker and Mr. Rowntree were among economists and social reformers who recently worked on the Land Inquiry Commission of the Liberal Party. This commission has published the most extensive and scientific study of the questions of land tenure, housing conditions and rural labor problems ever put forth.

As a result of the recommendations made by this commission, the Government is engaged in drafting legislation which it expects to submit to Parliament when the war broke out, and which, Mr. Lasker said, will be presented as soon as possible at the conclusion of the war. But while looking to those measures, the substantial improvements, those gentlemen see the increased complication of the labor problem which will immediately be felt when the war is over and they are frightened enough to begin now to study the question of what shall be done in England when peace has been declared.

"You must not be surprised if you see indications of what may seem to you a lack of patriotism among the British laboring men over this war," said Mr. Lasker. "They realize pretty thoroughly that the employing class is the only class that could possibly benefit by the war and that the burden of hardship are falling, and will continue to fall, on them. Peace propaganda has been carried on in England for many years and it was only last summer that the Labor party conducted an educational campaign against armaments. Well, some of the suit is what is called the unpatriotic attitude of labor in England today.

Asked about the prohibition question in England, Mr. Lasker said: "There is not the slightest chance of compulsory total prohibition. There is nothing like the amount of prohibition sentiment at home that I find in your country and what is more to the point, the British workers certainly resent the idea of prohibition as being aimed directly against their freedom of action. They understand clearly that the well-to-do classes are not likely to be affected by any prohibition law and again they are made to realize that the burden of war falls most heavily on them.

"Although the question of temperance enters into the problem of industrial efficiency, compulsory prohibition as a solution is impossible. The only thing to do in that direction is to create enough sentiment to make possible the enforcement of prohibition, or at least temperance, before any sweeping liquor statute is passed.

"But apparently the public and the press of your country do not grasp the fact that there is an actual dearth of labor in England today. I have reports from all sections of England telling of the insufficiency of labor, especially skilled labor, from the country. Why, things have come to such a pass that big manufacturers are going about trying to bribe workmen away from the plants of small concerns. Rather than drunkenness, the scarcity of war materials, and of all other supplies for that matter, is due to the fact that England has been forced to run her plants with unskilled labor and not enough of that. Now, of course, it is impossible to keep up normal production of that sort, much less talk of increasing the output of goods. And every recruit added to the army makes the situation worse.

"But there is one way in which the employers of England have benefited temporarily by the war. There were indications that had this war not started, there would have been a general strike of all transport workmen that would have tied up the whole country. That, for the time being, has been avoided, but when the war is over things may come to a crisis."

OFFICER LEADS ARMY IN HEROIC CHARGE ARMED WITH CANE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Cairo, June 9.—In recent dispatches from this place, mention was made of the nameless hero Sed el-Bahr—a certain colonel who, after the difficult landing operations there, and subsequent to the assault on the fortress, led the men in a gallant bayonet charge up a hill. All he carried was a small cane, but a band he wore in his arm apparently was in the way of a continuous fire, talking to the men, cheering them up and rallying them together. When they were all armed simply with this small cane, the charge up the hill. The moral effect of the officer's action was great. The men charged up the hill and cleared their enemy from his position. The unknown officer lost his life. It was reported that the officer was Major Doughty-Wylie and the hill on which he met his death is now known as "Doughty-Wylie's Hill."

He had no business to be there as he was a staff officer, but the loss among the officers in landing had been so great, and the necessity for making headway quickly was so essential, that Major Doughty-Wylie acted in the emergency.

SCHOOL PLAN IS OUTLINED BY PHILIPP

or that the state superintendent of public instruction will interfere with one another's work; or that rivalry between the two sets of assistants will injure where the bill aims to help the common school.

Our state constitution provides for a state superintendent of public instruction to be elected by the people. This same section leaves to the legislature to determine what other educational officials shall share with the superintendent public instruction. It also leaves to the legislature responsibility for deciding what the duties of the state superintendent of public instruction shall be. The provision reads:

Article 10, Section 1: "The supervision of public instruction shall be vested in a state superintendent and such other officers as the legislature shall direct, and the qualifications, powers, duties and compensations shall be prescribed by law."

It seems reasonable that an effort to co-operate and to prevent confusion will be just as successful if the state board's officer is called "commissioner" as if he were a "secretary" or "executive secretary."

Now one in the state thinks of the board of coordinate officers. Every one who knows of it at all knows that it is the office which is directed by the state superintendent of public instruction. The only conflict or confusion that might be serious would be a conflict or confusion of duties. No conflict of this kind exists. Against such confusion the bill specially provides. The two divisions of government are to supplement and strengthen.

Quibbling about titles should receive no consideration when the interests of our boys and girls are at stake. I am confident that the state superintendent of public instruction and his successors and the subordinates will find in the state board of education and its commissioner material backing which heretofore has been lacking for projects known to be necessary in the interest of the public schools. In other words, the central board bill removes from the normal schools and University the special advantage which they heretofore have enjoyed over the common schools, and gives to the public schools an organized citizen interest which it has always needed and heretofore has lacked when common school needs were before the legislature and the public.

In urging the passage of this bill I have had only the welfare and our educational institutions in mind. I am firmly of the opinion that we can render no greater service to the people of Wisconsin than to enact this bill into law and create a new government for our educational institutions designed to give equal opportunities to all who depend upon the state for an education.

Respectfully submitted,
EMANUEL L. PHILIPP, Governor.
